

WHY RECOMMENDED TRADE ROOMS ARE NO LONGER RECOMMENDED

Please understand first I do not function as a compliance officer – the rooms I recommend can do whatever they want after I recommend them and secondly, I do not function as an auditor – there are 1109 rooms currently and I certainly do not check in on them.

Having said that, you can be sure I receive several emails a week from fellow trades that speak to any and all deficiencies in rooms that I currently endorse/recommend. So in that regard, I am fully conversant with trade room deficiencies.

The deficiencies that are central to my removing any room from endorsement are:

- 1. No longer maintaining a forthright, detailed and track record of actual profit/trade or profit/day.*
- 2. No longer showing detailed trade entries, exits, targets*
- 3. No longer achieving a net P/L of $1000/wk over a 2-3-4+ month period*

I contact these rooms, often several times, to clarify and rectify what deficiencies exist and ask them to correct if possible. Some do, some tell me to get lost. So for:

- Alpha Wave Traders: 1 & 3*
- Bulls & Bears: 3*
- Day Trading the Futures 1 & 2*
- Global Trading Consortium: 1 & 3 + head trader an SEC criminal*
- Moore Research Center: 3*
- Strategic Day Trading: 1*
- Trade the Emini: 1 & 2 above*
- Trade Empowered 1 & 3*
- Trading Clan: 3*
- Trading Star Pro: 1 & 3*

So I dropped them. Rooms come and rooms go; my recommendations are dynamic but always aligned for trader's best interests, not the trade rooms.

I have NOT recommended Day Trading the Futures on the specific endorsement ever nor Trade Empowered nor Advanced Trading Workshop. They were mentioned in papers a while back but then they went off on their own.
